

The Habit that Makes You a People-Helper

As a believer, how should you respond to help others, especially those who are in great difficulty? You should pray . . . but are you confident that your prayers are effective? You should communicate . . . but will your input be scripturally accurate or merely an echo of the world's wisdom? You may need to ask others to assist you . . . but do you know whom to ask and are you sure their help will be scriptural?

All of the above responses are biblical and honor the Lord. They are most effective, however, when used by believers who have developed a habit of growing in Jesus Christ – the habit of thinking, speaking, and living according to Scripture. As a result, these believers are divinely equipped people Helpers who are God's gift to those who struggle with life's challenges.

Believers who continually grow in Christ demonstrate the practical benefit of, "It's not what you know, it's Who you know." Yet, in the process of knowing Christ in an ever-deepening manner, they learn what they need to know to help others.

For example, believers who are growing in Christ know that they have been given everything they need to live a life pleasing to God (2 Peter 1:3-4). They know that the Bible is the authority and guide for every aspect of life (2 Timothy 3:16-17). They have experienced the beneficial refinement of trials (1 Peter 1:6-7). They cooperate with God in the renewing of their minds (Romans 12:2). They know that human wisdom is foolishness to God (1 Corinthians 1:25).

Their ability to discern good and evil is growing as they consistently study and practice the Word of God (Hebrews 5:14). They avoid fleshly ways of living – manifested by desire for self-gratification and living by emotions – and, instead, practice Christ-honoring behavior (Ephesians 4:22-24).

They know the necessity of confessing their sins (1 John 1:9, James 5:16). They are ready to forgive and love, even in the most difficult of circumstances (Colossians 3:13-14). They demonstrate through thought, word, and deed the change Jesus Christ has made in their lives (Galatians 5:22-23).

If you are a maturing believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, you have experienced His comfort in difficulties and have the privilege of assisting others (2 Corinthians 1:3-4). By maintaining a habit of growing in Christ, you are acquiring an increased confidence in the Lord and in the sufficiency of Scripture to address any of life's challenges. Such confidence is not merely for you but is also for the benefit of helping others. You are divinely equipped to be a God-honoring people-helper.
